Instructions part 2: Tax residency

- A. You are generally considered a U.S. tax resident if you:
- are a U.S. citizen including individuals with dual citizenships,
 - are a U.S. resident,
 - hold a U.S. residence permit or U.S. work permit (Green Card), or
 - were born in the U.S.
- B. You are generally considered a tax resident in Denmark if you have established a home in Denmark. Even if you have not established a home in Denmark, you are deemed a tax resident in Denmark when you:
- stay in Denmark for a period of at least six months,
 - are a Danish citizen and is serving or permanently staying on board ships based in Denmark, or
 - are a Danish citizen and has been stationed abroad by the Danish state, regions, municipalities or other public institutions.
- C. Tax residency in other countries:
- It is possible to simultaneously be tax resident in several countries depending on each specific country's laws and regulations. In general, your tax residency is the country of your permanent residence or whereabouts. However, each country has its own set of rules for determining tax residence. Solely due to the fact that you pay tax on your property or withholding tax from yields on securities, you are not considered tax resident in the country. For more information on tax residency rules in specific jurisdictions, please visit the OECD Automatic Exchange Portal at: <http://www.oecd.org/tax/automatic-exchange/crs-implementation-and-assistance/tax-residency/#d.en.347760>

Instructions part 3: Taxpayer identification number (TIN)

- A. Taxpayer Identification numbers
- In the U.S. your TIN is usually your U.S. Social Security Number. Under certain circumstances, a functional equivalent is issued.
 - In Denmark your TIN is your CPR-number.
 - In other countries TINs vary but are often a national identification number or national insurance number.
- Further details of jurisdiction-specific TIN formats can be found on OECD's webpage: <http://www.oecd.org/tax/automatic-exchange/crs-implementation-and-assistance/tax-identification-numbers/>

Instructions part 4: Legal background

- A. Common Reporting Standard (CRS)
- CRS is an acronym for the "Common Reporting Standard" developed by the OECD. CRS is a global standard for the automatic transfer of financial account information with the purpose of preventing tax evasion. In accordance with CRS, Financial Institutions are required to identify individuals and entities with foreign tax residencies and report this information to the Danish tax authorities. This means that if the customer has tax residency in any other country than Denmark, Nordea is legally required to share the information stated in this form, and then file annual reports regarding the customer's account and products to the Danish tax authorities. In turn, the Danish tax authorities will transfer the information to the relevant CRS participating jurisdictions. For further information on CRS please access the following website: <http://www.oecd.org/tax/automatic-exchange/about-automatic-exchange/>
- B. Foreign Account Tax Compliance Act (FATCA)
- FATCA is a tax treaty which Denmark and the U.S., among other countries, have signed with the purpose of preventing tax evasion. It imposes the following legal requirements:
- Financial institutions are required to identify financial products held by U.S. persons
 - Financial institutions are required to provide the Tax Administration information on the identified financial products and U.S. customers
 - The Tax Administration is then required to convey the information to the U.S. tax authorities.
